Angelika Wollermann is a teacher of English and German and the coordinator of international projects at Staatliche Handelsschule Am Laemmermarkt in Hamburg/Germany (a vocational college and school).

She graduated in English, German, and Educational Studies from Hamburg University in 1996. After graduation she started her teacher training which lasted till 1998. Since 1998 she has been a teacher of German and English at Staatliche Handelsschule Am Laemmermarkt. Since 2003 she has been involved in projects funded by the European Commission. From 2003 till 2006 she was a participant in the Comenius School Development Project "SEFES – Self-Evaluation for European Schools". From 2006 till 2008 she was the international coordinator of the Comenius School Project "MarCoB – Marketing and Consumer Behaviour in a European Comparison" with five European partner schools. This project won several awards: Europaeisches Sprachensiegel 2007 (European Language Certificate 2007), Schulpreis der Hamburger Wirtschaft (an award by the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce) and the German National Agency (PAD) labelled the project as exemplary. Since 2009 she has been the national coordinator of the Comenius school project "ETM – Exploring Innovative and Creative Ways of Teaching Using New Tools and Methods" with seven European partner schools.
