Luciana Caffesse is a researcher at the "Internet International Institute" (IN3) and the eLearnCenter, for the Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, in Barcelona, Spain.

She is a PhD candidate in the eLearning track and her dissertation is focused on ICTs as mediating tools with the target language and culture for Foreign Language Teachers' Lifelong learning.

She graduated in Education – foreign language learning in adulthood—from the Université de Sherbrooke in the province of Quebec, in Canada in 2006. For the same university and since 2008, she has been lecturing two courses in a Masters' program completely offered online : "Analysis and design of didactic tools" and "Metacognition".

Luciana has a degree in English to Spanish Technical Translation. In 1992 she founded NEXA a company supplying translation and language instruction (both in-presence and online) to companies and institutions. She managed it and led the team of professionals in NEXA until 2008, and has been their advisor since then.
