Carola Strobl is Research Assistant at the Department of Applied Linguistics of University College Ghent. She has a teaching career as a German lecturer at universities in Germany, Italy, Portugal, and Belgium. In combination with experience in language technology, this has led to her interest in Computer-Assisted Language Learning. She is currently writing a dissertation on the impact of the underlying pedagogical approach (instructivist vs. socio-constructivist) of an online learning environment on the language acquisition process.
