Luisa Panichi is Lettore di Lingua Inglese at the Language Centre of the University of Pisa, Italy, and has been teaching foreign languages at tertiary level for 20 years. Her professional areas of interest include Language Awareness, Learner counselling and advising, Tandem language learning, materials development and the use of multimedia technology in foreign language education.

She is co-ordinator of Work Package 2 of the EU multilateral project AVALON (Access to Virtual and Action Learning live ONLINE) funded under the EACEA Life Long Learning Programme for the development of language learning scenarios in the virtual world of Second Life®.

Her most recent publications and published research address issues related to the teaching and learning of foreign languages in virtual worlds. She has recently undertaken a PhD in the Department of Modern Languages of the University of Hull, UK, where she plans to explore the dynamics and pragmatics of learner participation in language education.
