Sabela Melchor-Couto is a Lecturer in Spanish at Roehampton University, London.

Sabela graduated in Translation and Interpreting from the Universidad de Vigo (Spain) in 2003 and holds an MA in Conference Interpreting from Heriot-Watt University (Edinburgh). She started working as a freelance translator and interpreter and completed her teaching qualification during the same period. Sabela joined the Spanish Department at Heriot-Watt University (Edinburgh) in 2005, where she taught Spanish and Liaison Interpreting until 2008. She then moved to London to start working at Roehampton University (London) and she has been a Lecturer in Spanish at this institution for two years. She is currently the Spanish Language and Year Abroad Coordinator.

Sabela is now completing her PhD Thesis on the impact of affective variables in language learning at Universidad de Vigo (Spain). She is exploring the use of Second Life as a platform for language learning and teaching.
