Małgorzata Świątek has been the Director of the Jagiellonian University Language Centre, Krakow, Poland since the Centre was established in 2005. She manages the Centre staff of 120 teachers of foreign languages and administrative employees. Each year over 18000 students of the Jagiellonian University attend language courses designed and run by the Centre.

Małgorzata Świątek graduated from the Jagiellonian University, Philosophy Department with European Sciences as her major, in 2001. She started working with the British Council in Poland before her University graduation. In 2001 she was a member of the European Language Year Committee in Krakow and a member of the Festival of Sciences Board. Until 2004 she was responsible for coordination of the educational and cultural events of annual European Language Days in Krakow since the Council of Europe and European Union declared the year 2001 a year of languages.

Małgorzata Świątek is also a co-editor of 'Languages Dynamics and Linguistic Identity in the Context of European Integration', published in Krakow in 2002.
