Professor Hunt has a wealth of experience from a number of industry sectors including marine, defence, technology products and systems, security equipment, ICT, manufacturing and academia.

Professor Hunt graduated from Heriot Watt University with a degree in Mechanical Engineering and subsequently worked on projects in the defence sector to gain postgraduate qualifications. His particular area of specialism lies in technology and software product design and development, with emphasis on the development of efficient and effective systems design and processes. He has worked with a number of companies developing software and new product introduction processes.

As well as the Director of the Institute for Product Design and Manufacture, Ian is the Chairman of Cànan Limited. He is a Fellow of the Institution of Engineering Technology, was awarded the honorary position of ICL Distinguished Engineer and serves on a number of national advisory panels.
