Radmila Popovic is an Assistant Professor at the University of Belgrade and Visiting Scholar at the SIT Graduate Institute in Vermont. She holds an MA in Linguistics from the University of Belgrade, MA in TESOL from the SIT Graduate Institute in Vermont, and a PhD in Applied Linguistics from the University of Belgrade. Since 2009, she has been engaged in MA in TESOL on line program at the New School University in New York.

Having lived and studied both in her native country, Radmila is primarily interested in effective ways of drawing on the knowledge of 'foreign' and 'local' experts to effect educational change. She has co-designed and taught new PreSETT, mentor and teacher training courses in Serbia. She has also worked as a consultant for the British Council and Cambridge ESOL. Her research include second language acquisition, critical pedagogy and teacher education. She is a member of the TESOL Professional Development Committee.
