Fanny Chouc is a French Teaching Fellow at Heriot-Watt University, a higher education institution, based in Edinburgh (Scotland).

Fanny Chouc graduated from Tours University in British Civilisation and Renaissance History in 2002. She started working in the field of translation and interpreting teaching at Heriot-Watt University a few months after graduating.

In 2007, she also started working as a free-lance interpreter.

At the beginning of the 2008-2009 academic year, she became examination and career liaison officer.

So far, Fanny Chouc has been involved in course and class material design for undergraduate level in her teaching capacity. She has also been involved in the organisation and coordination of career information events in partnership with translation and interpreting professionals (agencies, translators, interpreters, project coordinator ...) and with representatives of EU institutions (DGT, DGI). She also coordinates the career information web-page for the Languages Department of Heriot-Watt University and manages the You Tube channel HWLangCareers.

Fanny Chouc is also conducting research on the use of ICT for translation and interpreting purposes and on employability. She has taken part in various conferences related to these themes over the past few years (Flexible Learning Conference in Heriot-Watt, 2007; LLAS conference on employability and the humanities, 2009; ASETRAD conference in Sevilla , 2010).
